

NEEDS EXPLANATION.

The Tribune has nothing to say as to the guilt or innocence of the parties; but when the machinery of a powerful government is in the hands of unscrupulous partisan politicians, who have already shown themselves regardless of the rights of citizens to life and liberty, it is well for accused persons to reserve every point in their favor till the critical moment of trial, and it will be well for all good citizens to consider the circumstances before condemning any man.

The above from the Tribune certainly needs explanation. We have yet to learn of any unscrupulous partisan politician who have shown themselves to be regardless of rights of citizens to "life and liberty." The parties against whom the charge of being unscrupulous rests with considerable effect, are those people who were given trusted positions by the Government, shamefully abused the confidence of their employee and robbed him. Our evening contemporary seems to labor under the impression that when a poor man steals from a rich and powerful Government he ought in some way to be excused for his act. When a Government loses money by theft, it is customary for the authorities to recover the loss. There is nothing unusual in the proceedings, what ver, nor does any one suppose that Uncle Sam wants to prosecute innocent persons. Any one of the four persons arrested against whom there should be no evidence in the trial will be very promptly acquitted on motion of the U. S. District Attorney.

The charge that this is a partisan prosecution needs explanation.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Senator Stewart is doing a yomans service in the cause of silver in the East. He is present at every convention and his voice rings out like a bugle call to arms, whenever he speaks. The Republicans of this State who would have us believe that the old silver-headed Senator is feeling the effect of age, are probably correct, but he is like old wine gets better every year. He is striking some sledge-hammer blows for silver and Nevada and cuts the widest swath of anyone. It takes a sturdy man like Stewart to swing the sythe in the tall grass when strength and staying qualities tell. When Stewart talks silver, the people know what they are hearing.

The Grand Jury insinuated in its report that the Supreme Court of California was corrupt, in certain cases Judge Beatty replied in a searching card that shows that the Grand Jury didn't know what it was talking about. Judge Beatty lived here many years and you cannot find a Nevada man who will not say that Judge Beatty is as pure a jurist as ever sat on a bench. There isn't money enough in California to buy one side of him. The APPEAL, however, cannot say this of all the Judges in California.

There lies this danger in giving a third term to any man for President: It serves to encourage perpetuation-in-chief of the army and navy. A bad man in three terms of the presidential office could surround himself with impenetrable bulwarks requiring revolution to unseat him—even if it could be thus effected. The people will defeat any third term no matter who he may be. Grant tried it and failed.

Russell Sage illustrates the fact that money does not always win law suits. A New York jury has allowed William Laidlaw $40,000 for standing between Sage and a sack of dynamite. Possibly the jury was influenced by the fact that the part Laidlaw enacted was not assumed voluntarily.

There is more money in the English banks than was ever known. The Bank of England contemplates reducing interest to 1 1/2 per cent. The banks of this country are plithoric with money awaiting investment. Revival of business will put this money in circulation.

Old Capt. Douglas of the San Francisco police force, has been retired. He should have stepped out of his uniform twenty years ago. New blood in the San Francisco police force has been needed for a long time.

Wells Drury formerly of this city is managing editor of the San Francisco Call. The Call is now giving the other morning papers a fine race for supremacy.

The Republican newspapers are more than displeased with the way the Mint investigations are going on.
